ROWAN OAK

Rowan Oak stands as a testament to Southern charm. The quiet dignity of Nobel prize-winning author William Faulker's estate is surrounded by oaks and trails designed to elicit imagination. Here, William Faulkner crafted his masterpieces, and today, visitors step inside his writing studio, where the walls still whisper with genius. Guided tours pull back the curtain on his creative world, offering a rare glimpse into the mind of a literary giant. A visit to Oxford isn't complete without walking in the footsteps of greatness.

WONDERBIRD SPIRITS

At Wonderbird Spirits, craftsmanship flows as smoothly as their award-winning gin, distilled from rice harvested in the heart of the Mississippi Delta. Each batch carries the essence of the region, emphasized by their Magnolia bottling which truly captures Oxford's heart—infused with hand-collected magnolia blooms for an ethereal hint of Southern elegance. Located just 10 minutes from downtown Oxford, visitors can tour the facility, learn about Wonderbird's unique distilling process, and sip the spirit of Mississippi in every glass.

OLE MISS

The University of Mississippi's campus is more than a place of learning—it's a living monument to history that shaped the world. Beneath its towering oaks, James Meredith shattered barriers, walking with quiet courage to desegregate the university and forever change the course of civil rights. Just steps away in the Blues Archive, echoes of the Delta blues hum through the air, a nod to the legends who shaped American music. Past and present intertwine here, making every visit a journey through history and progress.

THE SQUARE

Oxford's historic Square is the soul of the city—classic Southern architecture filled with modern energy. Lined with local restaurants, curated boutiques, and coffee shops, it invites visitors to linger, sip, and explore. The legendary Square Books stands two stories tall; a towering haven for literary lovers. Here, tales unfold in every corner—whether between the pages of a novel or in the warmth of a conversation over a perfectly brewed coffee.
